

Ethical Hacking Workshop

When people hear about computer hackers, they think of criminals wreaking havoc.

But this week in San Antonio, a special "ethical hacking" training workshop is taking place starting Monday and running through Friday. The training is for local business and military personnel.

Michael Gregg, a nationally known cyber security expert and author of a dozen books, is teaching the course, which will include lab exercises and in-depth training on cyber risks for business. The workshop covers Trojan computer attacks, malicious code, script injection and more.

For more information, contact Michael Gregg, at training@thesolutionfirm.com

- From staff reports

August 24, 2009